Woman in Wheel Chair Sues to Become Teacher

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM

Judy Heumann, a 22-year-old polio victim, filed suit in Federal District Court yesterday for the right to become the city's first teacher in a wheel chair.

Miss Heumann, who has passed the oral and written examinations required for a teacher's license here, charged that the Board of Education's refusal to give her a license discriminated against her because she was physically handicapped.

Her lawyers said the case was the first such civil rights suit ever filed in a Federal court. They hope to make it a test case for a series of suits across the country guaranteeing equal job and education rights for the physically handicapped, whom her lawyer called "one of our forgotten minorities."

The suit names as defendants the Board of Education, its Board of Examiners and Acting Superintendent Irving Anker. It seeks a judgment that the examiners' procedures, which do not permit hearings or legal she filed an appeal but received no further word.

"I feel qualified to teach now," Miss Heumann said yesterday at a news conference at the Overseas Press Club, 54 West 40th Street, "and I don't want to wait."

Pleads for Time

She currently teaches remedial reading for the State Division of Youth, which does not require a license. She lives in her own apartment at 175 Be-Wiloughby Street in downtown Brooklyn.

Dr. Jay Greene, chairman of ity of issuing special licenses to handicapped persons.

The United Federation of Teachers is supporting Miss Heumann, and Mayor Lindsay is known to have written the Board of Examiners recently urging "a thoughtful and compassionate review" of the case. Members of both the Board of Education and the Board of Examiners expressed sympathy for Miss Heumann's case yesterday, but said they also had to assure the safety of pupils, such as during fire emergencies.

Electric Wheel Chair

Miss Heumann uses an electric wheel chair that, she said, enables her to move faster than those walking normally.

One of her lawyers, Roy Lucas of the James Madison Constitutional Law Institute, said the case was "part of the very substantial civil rights movement of recent years." He mentioned, as one example, the employment by the city of several blind teachers.

Mr. Lucas said future suits would challenge unequal ad-

Dr. Theodore H. Lang, deputy superintendent of schools, said Miss Heumann's case had prompted a thorough review of policy regarding employment of the physically handicapped in the city's schools. This is to be completed within about two weeks, he said. Miss Heumann's case is being delayed pending the results, he added.

It was understood that the study has included the possi-

RICHARD E. LEWIS AWARD

Charlie Conefrey - Malden High School

Year: 2023

This award is presented to an individual who embodies the virtues of an outstanding, model athletic administrator. An individual who was recognized by their colleagues for his continued support and guidance of others in the profession. In addition, this individual is someone who encourages new individuals into the profession as an Athletic Director, as well as fosters others to continue to grow in their roles as an Athletic Administrator. Someone who fully supports the Athletic Administration professional and all that it encompasses; through his work at the league, district and state levels. We are pleased to present the 2023 Richard E. Lewis Award to Charlie Conefrey in recognition of his guidance and support as an Athletic Administrator. The Massachusetts Secondary Schools Athletic Directors Association commends Charlie Conefrey for his outstanding contributions and invaluable service to interscholastic high school athletics.
